Additional charge filed against Kinser after device detonates

Woman suffers injury to face from explosion

BY MARK CAMPBELL

A device allegedly constructed by the Kentucky man who was arrested for manufacturing a destructive device on Jan. 6, accidentally detonated on Wednesday and wounded a Madison woman.

Madison Police responded to a hilltop apartment at 2861 Kennedy Drive Wednesday in reference to a possible explosive device. Upon arrival, officers spoke with the occupant of the apartment and were able to determine that the device had been detonated and the woman had "obvious injuries to the face," said a release by MPD Chief John Wallace.

The women was transported to the King's Daughters' Hospital Emergency Room and later transferred to University Hospital in Louisville.

Meanwhile, officers evacuated the apartment complex as a precaution and, after determining that no other devices were present, the occupants were cleared to return to their homes.

Cameron Kinser

Madison Police detectives determined that the device had been in the apartment for several months and that the occupant had inadvertently detonated the device while attempting to dispose of it.

First snow of 2021 causes a few slideoffs

BY MARK CAMPBELL

A band of freezing rain and snow — the first winter storm of 2021 locally — led to several fender-benders and slideoffs Wednesday evening and Thursday morning throughout the Courierarea after the way the precipitation arrived made it difficult for road crews to keep highways clean.

"We had some snowfall, it melted and then refroze and then we got more snow on top so there wasn't much the road crews could do about it and they do a good job," said Madison Police Chief John Wallace. "But when you've got it snowing a half-inch to three-quarters of an inch per hour it's hard to keep up."

Overall, the amount of precipitation received ended up being about 1½ to 3 inches over the area but it was enough to make for some slippery commuting as main roads were slushy and side roads were covered in snow and ice with visibility limited especially once the sun went down.

Telegraph Hill and Michigan Road Hill were both closed for periods of time due to slick conditions and slide-offs and Hanging Rock Hill was closed for several hours until highway crews could plow and salt that curvy incline connecting downtown Madison to State Road 7. By Thursday afternoon main roadways were clear and dry and most side roads were clear but still wet.

Jefferson County Chief Deputy Joshua Taylor said officers and tow truck crews worked several slide-offs in the county — especially on China Hill, South State Road 62 and Deputy Pike— and there was one

Jefferson back in the 'orange' on spread of COVID-19

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Jefferson County has moved back into the "Orange" COVID-19 advisory category after having spent the last few weeks in the "Red" advisory. The notification was given on Wednesday at noon by the Indiana Department of Health and means the county is actually seeing less new cases of the coronavirus than in recent weeks.

"While this is good news for Jefferson County, we must remain vigilant as we continue through the winter months," Jefferson County Health Department Administrator Tammy Monroe said in a press release

"Orange" advisory means the county is still seeing moderate to high community spread of the virus and is well above the "Yellow" and "Blue" advisories the county remained in throughout the summer and most of the fall.

Now that Jefferson County has stayed in the "Orange" advisory for two consecutive weeks, the county may follow "Orange" regulations.

"Orange" advisory regulations provide that social gatherings of any kind be limited to 50 people, along with all general requirements of mask wearing, social distancing and hand sanitizing/washing. Vulnerable populations should remain isolated and all business capacity must adhere to strict social distancing guidelines with curbside pickup preferred. In addition, all businesses are required to place clearly visible signage at their public and employee entrances notifying that face coverings are required. Businesses should only admit those who wear face coverings properly — meaning over the nose and mouth — and practice social distancing.

Community recreational sports leagues and tournaments may continue with participants, required personnel, and parents/guardians and their minor children only. However, sports leagues may also choose to institute stricter regulations. As far as schools are concerned, K-12 extracurricular and co-curricular activities may continue but attendance is limited to 25% capacity — schools may also choose to institute stricter regulations — and all students and attendees

Lanier's Peck hopes to work with the community

BY BOB DEMAREE

Derek Peck, the new manager for Madison's Lanier Mansion State Historic Site, has moved around several times in his career from Mississippi in the deep south to the redwood forests of coastal California — with even a stop at Hoover Damn in between — but after spending the past month at Lanier and in historic Madison, he has hopes of staying around for a long time.

"I love being able to focus on everything to do with this home and its mission. It's a gorgeous home in a gorgeous town," Peck, who was named site manager last December, said. "Most importantly, (the Lanier Mansion) is a story of the Lanier generosity, and the opportunity to see the home, and how the family lived. Those are great reasons to come visit."

James Franklin Doughty Lanier, a banker and railroad man, provided interest-free financial support for the state of Indiana during the Civil War by lending $400,000 to arm and equip troops and $640,000 to pay the interest on the state debt. His Francis Costigan-designed Greek Revival mansion overlooks the Ohio River on Vaughn Drive in downtown Madison.

"Because of his generosity, the state preserved the home as a memorial," Peck noted.

Peck said everything about the Lanier Mansion and Madison meshes well with his passions and background.

"This blends all of my previous experiences," he noted.

MADISON COURIER GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY RUNNER OF THE YEAR

Nina Campbell

Shawe sophomore Calli Alderman is the Madison Courier Girls Cross Country Runner of the Year.

Alderman places herself among the state's best

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Every high school athlete sets goals for themselves. But it's the rare competitor who is able to set high goals and actually achieve and exceed them.

Calli Alderman is that rare competitor. Coming off of a successful freshman season that saw her reach the semistate, Alderman wanted to go even higher and she did just that, become the first female runner in Shawe Memorial High School history — and just second overall — to qualify for the IHSAA Cross Country State Finals.

"Calli started the season out very determined to improve on her freshman year's performance, with her biggest goal of making it to state," Shawe coach Jim Leveille said. "Her determination and the overwhelming support she received from Shawe and the entire Madison community are what allowed her to reach that goal."

Alderman was an easy choice to repeat as the Madison Courier's Girls Cross Country Runner of the Year. She won at nearly every level, winning the Ohio River Valley Conference title and her second-straight sectional championship. She posted her best season time of 19:20 at the semistate to punch her ticket to the state finals in Terre Haute.

Alderman's performance at the state finals didn't go as she would have liked, finishing 154th in 20:56.4. Although her time was nearly a minute and a half slower than a week earlier, her finish was enough to claim the Indiana Track and Cross Country Coaches Association award for Class A Runner of the Year.

Alderman said it was a thrill to run in the state finals, but running on an unfamiliar course, coupled with the still competition, and lots of it, conspired to keep her from doing better.

"I was a little nervous and I felt like I was stuck in my pack for most of my run," she said. "I think the hardest part was not being to go there and practice on the course."

That finish at the state finals couldn't diminish her spectacular season. Alderman said that she got a boost this year when senior Eliza Weston transferred to Shawe from Trimble County, Kentucky. Weston was the only local runner to post comparable times to Alderman, and even though she was not eligible to compete until the final weeks of the season, Alderman said having Weston run with her in practice was a huge asset.

"I definitely like having her on the team this year," Alderman said. "She really pushed me."

"Having the added bonus of Eliza Weston joining the team and training along side her, gave her daily training competition of the highest level, " said Leveille.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKEBALL ROUNDUP

Madison rally falls short in loss to 3rd-ranked Trinity

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison's fourth-quarter comeback fell two points short and the Cubs dropped a 63-61 decision at Class 1A No. 3 Trinity Lutheran in girls basketball on Thursday.

Madison trailed throughout the game and was facing a 47-37 deficit entering the fourth. The Cubs then outscored Trinity 24-16 over the final eight minutes but couldn't get over the hump.

Senior Jade Nutley scored 28 points and had 10 rebounds to lead Madison while fellow senior Lundun Perry continued her recent hot streak with 19 points and four rebounds. Daesja Jay added 10 points and four rebounds and Taylor Lynch had four points, seven rebounds and four assists.

Sydney Jaynes had 24 points and 11 rebounds while Bailey Tabeling had 22 points to lead Trinity (18-4).

Madison, now 10-11 on the season, wraps up the regular season today when it hosts Southwestern in the long-delayed Turkey Shootout. The Cubs then open the Class 3A Sectional at home against North Harrison on Wednesday.

TRIMBLE GIRLS BEAT GALLATIN

Trimble County took over the game in the second quarter and never looked back, rolling to a 50-33 girls basketball win at Gallatin County on Thursday for its first district win of the season.

The Raiders led only 17-13 after the first quarter but rolled ahead 32-19 at the half after dominating the second and cruised from there.

"This was probably our best game of the season. We moved the ball better on offense and did a better job on the defensive end," Trimble coach Kerrie Stewart said. "We got into passing lanes and forced some turnovers and did a better job of transitioning from deny to help and help to deny. We saw more fire from the beginning and did a great job sharing the ball. A good win and one to build on."

Freshman Addison Edmondson scored 17 points and senior Emma Horn had 10 to lead Trimble while senior Shelby Wilcoxson scored eight points and sophomore Emma Ginn had seven.

Ashtyn Stewart scored nine points to lead Gallatin.

Trimble, now 4-6 overall and 1-2 in both the North Central Kentucky Conference and 31st District play, travels to Williamstown today and heads to Walton-Verona on Monday before hosting Carroll County on Tuesday as part of a boys-girls doubleheader.

REBELS LOSE TIGHT MATCH TO JCD

Southwestern put up a fight but fell short of the upset, falling 46-37 to Class A No. 2 Jac-Cen-Del in girls basketball Thursday in Osgood.

The Rebels stayed on JCD's heels for much of the game, leading 11-9 after the first quarter and trailing just 24-23 at the half. The Eagles got some breathing room in the third, pulling ahead 35-27 and then held on for the win.

With the win, Jac-Cen-Del finished the Ohio River Valley Conference campaign with a perfect 6-0 record to win the league championship for the fourth-straight year.

Ellie Foley scored 17 points to lead Southwestern while Isabel Brooks scored eight.

Southwestern, now 12-7 on the season, finishes with a 3-3 mark in the ORVC. The Rebels travel to Madison today to finally play the delayed Turkey Shootout then faces Milan in the opening round of the IHSAA Class 2A Sectional at South Ripley on Tuesday.

LADY PACERS FALL TO SOUTH RIPLEY

Switzerland County lost a low-scoring affair to South Ripley, 38-22, in a potential sectional championship preview Thursday in Versailles.

No. 1 Cardinals remain undefeated

BY STEVE BITTENBENDER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Olivia Cochran scored 14 of her 17 points in the first half to lead top-ranked Louisville, which withstood a late rally to beat North Carolina 79-68 on Thursday night.

The Cardinals (16-0, 9-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) started strong. They made eight of their first 10 shots to take a 21-9 lead in less than six minutes and built a 67-35 lead late in the third quarter.

But the Tar Heels (8-6, 3-6) made things interesting with a 17-0 second-half run. They got it down to an eight-point deficit with 1:18 left, but they could not get any closer.

Cochran ended the first half with a buzzer-beating 3-pointer from the wing to make it 55-30. It was the first trey of the season for the 6-foot-3 freshman.

The Cardinals, who are 16-0 for the second time in school history, built that big lead by going toe-to-toe with one of the conference's top rebounding (10.7 average margin) and defensive (34.7%) teams. Through three quarters, they shot 53% and held a 27-22 edge on the boards.

"We came on the court very ready and just ready to kick some butt," she said.

But Louisville coach Jeff Walz took the blame for letting UNC back in the contest as he said he had some "bad combinations" on the court. He also didn't call a time out as the Cardinals went more than six minutes without a basket.

"I was trying to see if they could figure it out and try to come up with a couple of stops," he said.

UNC lost for the fourth time in their last five games. They've also yet to win on the road in four tries this season.

HANOVER ROUNDUP

Hanover men use big 2nd half to top Franklin

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Hanover men's basketball rallied in the second half to post a 70-65 victory over Franklin at home on Thursday.

The Panthers got off to a rough start and trailed 34-27 at the half. Hanover still trailed by seven (52-45) with nine minutes play before chipping away in the stretch. Connor Washburn's two free throws with 3:01 to go put Hanover on top 62-60 and the Panthers got a 3-pointer Max Greenamoyer, four points from Washburn and a free throw by Ty Houston down the stretch to secure the win.

Washburn scored 16 points and had 11 rebounds to lead Hanover while Greenamoyer scored 15 points and Brice Gilman had 10. The game marked the first the Panthers have played after leading scorer Isaac Hibbard, a senior from New Albany, opted out of the rest of the season due to concerns over COVID. He plans on returning next year.

Sam Gutierrez scored 18 points and Danny Goggans had 12 points and 11 rebounds to lead Franklin (3-4, 2-3 Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference).

Hanover, now 3-2 overall and 2-0 in the HCAC, travels to Franklin today. The Panthers then head to Earlham next Friday.

Hanover's Alex Westerbeck fires a shot during the Panthers' win over Franklin on Thursday.

Hanover's Connor Washburn goes hard to the basket during the Panthers' win over Franklin on Thursday.

Hanover used a big second quarter to build a lead and was still ahead 45-37 heading into the fourth. But the Grizzlies caught fire over the final 10 minutes to pull away for the win.

Freshmen Skylar Sahatjian and Addie Gardner each came off the bench to score 10 points to lead Hanover. Savannah Courtney added nine points and Liz Tynan scored eight.

Lindsay Frejie scored 15 points and Cassidy Yant had 10 to lead Franklin.

Brady charting new course with Colts without Rivers

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Marcus Brady takes over an Indianapolis Colts offense in flux.

Quarterback Philip Rivers and longtime left tackle Anthony Castonzo have retired. Brady's predecessor as offensive coordinator, Nick Sirianni, is off to Philadelphia. Passing game specialist Kevin Patullo left another hole when he followed Sirianni to the Eagles, and general manager Chris Ballard still must decide whether to re-sign soon-to-be free agents T.Y. Hilton and Marlon Mack.

Instead of fretting, Brady is digging deep, working hard and adapting to the new reality.

"Every team goes through it, so it is really nothing new," he said Tuesday on an introductory video call. "Obviously, quarterback is a very important position, left tackle is a very important position so we have to address those issues. That's a process we are going to be working on. Chris and his staff do a great job. (Coach) Frank (Reich) and I will put our heads together as an entire group and staff and put the best roster out there."

For Brady, it's a new challenge.

He's spent 16 years in coaching, with Indianapolis being his only NFL stop. Brady joined Reich's staff as the assistant quarterbacks coach in 2018. A year later, he was named the primary quarterbacks coach. Now, he'll be in charge of the offense, even if he's not calling plays.

Brady has risen quickly through the ranks, even prompting interest from other teams before Sirianni's departure. The 41-year-old Brady now becomes the third Black offensive coordinator in the NFL, joining Kansas City's Eric Bienemy and Tampa Bay's Byron Leftwich the same week the other two made reached the Super Bowl.

"I understand what's going on in the media because it is a topic of discussion — the lack of minorities getting these opportunities," Brady said after thanking the Colts for believing in him. "I understand that I have to go out there and do a great job. It is my responsibility, given this opportunity, to go out there and produce so others get the same opportunities I have been blessed with here."

Fortunately, Brady isn't starting from scratch.

Indy's other four starting offensive linemen will return and rookie Jonathan Taylor cemented his role as Mack's successor by topping 1,000 yards last season. Zack Pascal, rookie Michael Pittman Jr. and the oft-injured Parris Campbell headline a receiving corps that promises to be solid — with or without Hilton.

Even the quarterback transition seems relatively routine for Brady.

When the longtime Canadian Football League veteran was initially hired, Andrew Luck was the starter. Luck's abrupt retirement in August 2019 forced the Colts to go with Jacoby Brissett. Then last season, Rivers replaced Brissett. With Brissett also about to become a free agent and Jacob Eason the only quarterback under contract on Indy's roster, Brady will likely be working with his fourth opening-day starter in four years.

Ideal? No. But it won't faze the unflappably soft-spoken Brady.

"We adapt well to the players, not just the quarterback position but everybody that we have on the offense," he said. "Once we finalize that position, which is a very important position, we will adapt the offense and tailor it to his strengths."

Washington's King the 1st Black female assistant position coach

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington promoted Jennifer King to assistant running backs coach Tuesday, making her the first Black female assistant position coach in the NFL.

She is the second woman in league history to be an assistant position coach after Tampa Bay's assistant defensive line coach Lori Locust. King spent the 2020 season as a full-year coaching intern under Ron Rivera and worked with running backs coach Randy Jordan.

Rivera said King came to Washington eager for the opportunity and is deserving of the promotion.

"The sky is truly the limit for her," Rivera said. "She got the chance to experience not only the in-season work that goes into being a full-time coach in this league but also the countless hours that are spent preparing in the offseason, as well.

"She demonstrated all of the qualities that are needed to work full time on my staff. She is a hard worker, a great communicator and a quality person. Coach King is always eager to learn and has shown tremendous growth since starting here last season."

King previously interned for Rivera with the Carolina Panthers and has also been an assistant at Dartmouth College and for the Arizona Hotshots of the Alliance of American Football.

"I am very pleased to have coach King back to assist me full time in the running backs room," Jordan said. "She was extremely helpful last year in seeing the game from a different perspective, and she was a tremendous communicator in our room. I look forward to continuing to collaborate as we move forward in our program and as she moves forward in her coaching career."

CARDINALS

Tar Heels coach Courtney Banghart said she thought Louisville might have sensed an opportunity early in the game thanks to No. 2 N.C. State losing earlier in the evening at Virginia Tech.

"I think they felt like they could have some separation, and they played like in that first quarter, holy moly, and throughout the game," she said. "Obviously, once we got through the onslaught, we were fine, but that onslaught was a little hard to gather from."

Petra Holesinska scored a season-best 26 points to lead the Tar Heels.

POLL IMPLICATIONS

It hasn't been easy for Louisville since earning the No. 1 ranking for the first time in school history, but the Cardinals keep winning. With N.C. State, Louisville's next foe, and UConn losing Thursday, it should give Louisville a firm grasp on that position for another week.

Louisville hosts current No. 2 N.C. State on Monday night.

ALDERMAN

Weston ended up placing second to Alderman in the ORVC meet and qualified for the regional.

It's almost fate that Alderman was able to complete her season at all. Just days after the state finals, Alderman was hit with the first of several quarantines for COVID-19 that kept her out of school for nearly two months. She actually ended up contracting the disease several weeks ago but has made a full recovery.

"It's definitely been different. It's been really stressful," Alderman said of the time away.

Alderman is back to school full-time and has been playing with the Shawe girls basketball team, scoring a career-high 13 points in the Hilltoppers' loss to Milan on Monday.

But Alderman already has her sights set on what will be her first high school track & field season in the spring and of course her junior season of cross country. After making the state finals this past season, she has increased her goal to finishing even higher.

Leveille, for one, knows that his star has what it takes to push herself to among the elite runners in the state.

"Calli is already focused on next year's season and even if track is interrupted by the pandemic, she will put in a higher volume of training over the summer to prepare," Leveille said. "She was not satisfied with her finish at State. My experience has been that, when she is not happy with her performance, she does whatever it takes to fix it. Making State was this season's goal. Moving up at State is next year's goal. It was a pleasure coaching Calli this year and watching her really mature as a runner and competitor."

The host Raiders led 24-13 heading into the third quarter before outscoring the Swiss 14-9 in the fourth to pull out the win.

Jessie Duvall led Switzerland with 10 points and six rebounds while Maddie Duvall had eight points and five rebounds and Keirstan Oeffinger had two points, five steals and four rebounds.

Switzerland County ends the regular season with a 17-5 overall record and 4-2 in the ORVC. The 17 wins represent the most the Pacers have won in a season since going 21-6 and reaching the regional final in the 2014-15 season.

Switzerland now turns its attention to the sectional tournament at South Ripley where the Pacers received the first-round bye and will play the winner between Southwestern and Milan on Friday. Feb. 5.

CAM KNOCKS OFF ASSUMPTION

Christian Academy pulled away in the fourth quarter to beat Assumption Academy (Ky.) 49-41 at home on Tuesday.

Jaxon Miller scored 17 points and had five rebounds to lead the Defenders while Chase Hoskins had 13 points and 11 rebounds and Clay Carter scored nine points and had five assists.

Christian Academy is now 11-7 on the season but the Defenders' next three games have been postponed due to COVID concerns. The school is trying to find replacements for those games but the next scheduled contest for the Defenders will be when they compete in the Danville (Ky.) Invitational starting Friday, Feb. 5.

DEVICE

Madison Police had arrested Cameron Kinser, 32, Crestwood, Kentucky, on two counts of possession, manufacture, transportation or distribution of a destructive device, both Level 5 felonies, on Jan. 6 and he had been lodged in the Jefferson County Jail ever since. However, as a result of MPD's investigation on Wednesday, detectives determined that Kinser was the alleged manufacturer of the device that detonated injuring the woman and that he had left the device in the apartment, which he apparently frequented.

Kinser now faces an additional charge of manufacturing a destructive device, a Level 2 felony. The higher felony level is due to the injuries sustained in the detonation. While a Level 5 felony is punishable by one to six years in prison, a Level 2 felony carries a sentence of 10 to 30 years in prison and both have up to $10,00o fines each.

The investigation was led by MPD Detective Shawn Scudder, with the assistance of Detectives Kyle Cutshaw, Jeremey Perkins and Ricky Harris. Officers Aaron Watson, Cameron Blankenship and Zack Nicholson assisted at the scene and Indiana State Police Dangerous Device Technician Rick Stockdale is assisting the MPD with the investigation along with Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter.

Those involved in movie recall crossing paths with Hollywood star

BY BOB DEMAREE

When actress Cloris Leachman died at the age of 94 on Tuesday, she was remembered as an Oscar winner for role in "The Last Picture Show" and a multiple Emmy winner, most notably for work on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

But for many people in Switzerland County, they knew Leachman for the role of Old Mam Hawes in the movie, "A Girl Named Sooner" and for her time spent there when the picture was filmed during the summer of 1974.

Jeni Farrar of Vevay was actually Leachman's stand-in on the movie set.

"It was my very first job," said Farrar, who was 16 at the time. Whatever Leachman had to do in her various scenes, Farrar was there for every moment.

"They would do the lighting around me" to get it set up for Leachman.

Farrar said that Ken Beckett, her English and Drama teacher, noticed her blonde hair, and that she was about the same height and weight as Leachman, and recommended her for the $50 a day job.

"It just happened that I fit, and I think they knew they could trust me" to be there every day, said Farrar, who only missed two days during filming— for her brothers' wedding. "I have had a good work ethic all my life," Farrar said, noting a lot of that probably comes from her experience of being a stand-in for Leachman, who was all business on the set.

"I loved her work with TV shows and in movies," said Farrar. "I loved the experience but she was very professional and I think she was trying to stay in character."

She said other members of the crew were more approachable and made for a fun experience she will always remember.

"I got to be close with the lighting guys and the sound guys. It was a great experience, a dream for a 16-year-girl," said Farrar, noting she considered it an honor to have the opportunity to be the stand-in for Leachman. "It was a great a summer, the best summer of my life."

Andrea Brown Hallett and Jill Demaree Porten were 10 year olds when they were hired to be in the movie for a scene in which they were throwing rocks at a bird. "It was all Hollywood trickery," said Porten, who noted they weren't really throwing at the birds but the film sure made it seem that way in the movie.

Actress Cloris Leachman removes makeup to age her for the role of a weathered 65-year-old woman in the movie "A Girl Named Sooner," filmed in Vevay in July 1974. Makeup artists used rubber cement to give the then 32-year-old Leachman the appearance of wrinkles for the role. When Leachman removed the cement at the end of filming daily it would pull out facial hairs and leave her skin raw.

And, because of their participation in that scene, they actually got to meet Leachman.

"She was adorable, very sweet to the kids. She was very nice to us," said Hallett, who grew up in Vevay but now lives in Indianapolis.

Porten agreed, "She was very nice. She didn't have to be, but she took the time to be nice."

At the time the movie was filmed in 1974, Leachman a 32-year-old who was crowned Miss America in 1946, was playing Old Mam, an embittered 65-year-old woman. For the role, Leachman wore a layer of rubber cement to give her wrinkles and had her teeth darkened. Porten said her sister, Shona Yazell, who was also in the movie, recalled Leachman's teeth because the actress would only eat salads on set to keep from messing up the make up used to age her teeth.

Mike Danner of Vevay remembers Leachman sitting on the porch of his parents' home on Market Street in Vevay. "It was next door to where they were filming. She was very nice and easy to talk with, just like anyone else. All of the actors were very pleasant," he said.

Porten, who grew up in rural Switzerland County near Pleasant, recalls that she and her sister rode to Vevay in the rumble seat of her grandparents' Model A car, which was also being used in the movie. "That was quite an experience," said Porten, who now lives in Vevay.

John Haskell of Vevay said he was 16 years old when the production needed a calf from his Dad's farm. He remembers talking to Leachman about working on a dairy farm and Leachman saying, "That must be glorious to be around animals all the time and not people."

When Haskell told Leachman he wanted to become a dairy farmer, Leachman answered, "What a glorious life! Animals and freedom! You are truly blessed."

Haskell said he thought Leachman enjoyed her time in Switzerland County. "She was interested in everyone here and took an interest in the community. She thought this place was peaceful and liked it here."

"A Girl Named Sooner" premiered on NBC-TV on June 18, 1975, and was the highest rated television show of the week.

In that day's edition of The Madison Courier, former staff writer Steve White wrote an article that included reviews of the movie. He quoted Arthur Unger of the Christian Science Monitor, who said the movie "proved a fabulous vehicle for Cloris Leachman, an actress who can play anything and proves it periodically. In this one, she wrinkles her skin, puckers her mouth, and toddles across the screen the most outrageous TV impersonation of Dirty Sally."

Oscar-winning actress defied type-casting throughout her career

LOS ANGELES — Cloris Leachman, an Oscar-winner for her portrayal of a lonely housewife in "The Last Picture Show" and a comedic delight as the fearsome Frau Blücher in "Young Frankenstein" and self-absorbed neighbor Phyllis on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," has died. She was 94.

Cloris Leachman

Leachman died in her sleep of natural causes at her home in Encinitas, California, publicist Monique Moss said Wednesday. Her daughter Dinah Englund was at her side, Moss said.

A character actor of extraordinary range, Leachman defied typecasting. In her early television career, she appeared as Timmy's mother on the "Lassie" series. She played a frontier prostitute in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," a crime spree family member in "Crazy Mama," and Blücher in Mel Brooks' "Young Frankenstein," in which the very mention of her name drew equine commentary.

"Every time I hear a horse whinny I will forever think of Cloris' unforgettable Frau Blücher," Brooks tweeted, calling Leachman "insanely talented" and "irreplaceable."

Salutes from other admiring colleagues poured in on social media. Steve Martin said Leachman "brought comedy's mysteries to the big and small screen." "Nothing I could say would top the enormity of my love for you," posted Ed Asner of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." "Applause on every entrance and exit," said Rosie O'Donnell.

"There was no one like Cloris. With a single look she had the ability to break your heart or make you laugh 'till the tears ran down your face," Juliet Green, her longtime manager, said in a statement.

In 1989, Leachman toured in "Grandma Moses," a play in which she aged from 45 to 101. For three years in the 1990s she appeared in major cities as the captain's wife in the revival of "Show Boat." In the 1993 movie version of "The Beverly Hillbillies," she assumed the Irene Ryan role as Granny Clampett.

She also had an occasional role as Ida on "Malcolm in the Middle," winning Emmys in 2002 and 2006 for that show. Her Emmy haul over the years totaled eight, including two trophies for Moore's sitcom, tying her with Julia Louis-Dreyfus as the top Emmy winners among performers.

In 2008, Leachman joined the ranks of contestants in "Dancing With the Stars," not lasting long in the competition but pleasing the crowds with her sparkly dance costumes, perching herself on judges' laps and cussing during the live broadcast.

She started out as Miss Chicago in the Miss America Pageant and willingly accepted unglamorous screen roles.

"Basically I don't care how I look, ugly or beautiful," she told an interviewer in 1973. "I don't think that's what beauty is. On a single day, any of us is ugly or beautiful. I'm heartbroken I can't be the witch in 'The Wizard of Oz.' But I'd also like to be the good witch. Phyllis combines them both.

"I'm kind of like that in life. I'm magic, and I believe in magic. There's supposed to be a point in life when you aren't supposed to stay believing that. I haven't reached it yet."

During the 1950s, Leachman became busy in live TV drama, demonstrating her versatility, including in roles that represented casting standards of that era.

"One week I'd be on as a Chinese girl, the next as a blond cockney and weeks later as a dark-haired someone else," she recalled. In 1955, she made her film debut in a hard-boiled Mickey Spillane saga, "Kiss Me Deadly" — "I was the naked blonde that Mike Hammer picked up on that dark highway."

She followed with Rod Serling's court-martial drama, "The Rack," and a season on "Lassie." She continued in supporting roles on Broadway and in movies, then achieved her triumph with Peter Bogdanovich's "The Last Picture Show," based on the Larry McMurtry novel.

When Leachman received the Oscar as best supporting actress of 1971, she delivered a rambling speech in which she thanked her piano and dancing teachers and concluded: "This is for Buck Leachman, who paid the bills." Her father ran a lumber mill. Despite her photogenic looks, she continued to be cast in character parts. Her most indelible role was Phyllis Lindstrom on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Phyllis often visited Mary's apartment, bringing laments about her husband Lars and caustic remarks about Mary and especially about her adversary, another tenant, Rhoda Morgenstern (Valerie Harper). Phyllis was so unexpectedly engaging that Leachman starred in a spinoff series of her own, "Phyllis," which ran on CBS from 1975 to 1977.

With "Young Frankenstein," Leachman became a member of "the Mel Brooks stock company," also appearing in "High Anxiety" and "History of the World, Part I." Her other films included Bogdanovich's "Daisy Miller," and "Texasville," repeating her role in "The Last Picture Show." In 2009, she released her autobiography, "Cloris," which made tabloid headlines for her recounting of a "wild" one-night stand with Gene Hackman.

Cloris Leachman grew up on the outskirts of Des Moines, Iowa, where she was born in 1926. The large family lived in an isolated wooden house with no running water, but the mother had ambitious ideas for her children. Cloris took piano lessons at the age of 5; since the family could not afford a piano, she practiced on a cardboard drawing of the keys.

"I'm going to be a concert pianist," the girl announced, and her mother encouraged her with bookings at churches and civic clubs. She arranged for Cloris to ride on a coal truck to Des Moines for an audition for a Drake University student play. She was given the role and appeared in other plays at a local theater. After high school, she won a scholarship to

For seven years, Peck worked for the Battle of Franklin Trust — historic sites in Tennessee which preserve and interpret the stories of the people impacted by the Civil War. With that, Peck not only developed a strong interest in the battles that took place, but also the time period and the architecture.

Peck called the Lanier Mansion "one of the best Greek Revival architecture homes I have seen. It magnanimous. What's interesting is that most Greek Revival homes are southern plantations" and included quarters for slaves. But Lanier was anti-slave, Peck said, relating that Lanier had actually been given slaves, but set them free.

Peck said while the Lanier is the crown jewel along Madison's riverfront, the majestic home is made even more spectacular by the ongoing historic preservation throughout the city of Madison's 130-block downtown National Historic Landmark District.

"I'm amazed at how preserved this town is. Living in different parts of the country, I have seen a lot of historic districts. I've not seen a town like this that has such an expansive historic district," he said.

Peck said he eventually has hopes of living in one of Madison's historic homes and work closely with the community.

"What's good for the Lanier Home is good for Madison and what's good for Madison is good for the Lanier Home. It's extremely important to be part of the community," he said.

But that's been tough to do so far with tourism and sites like Lanier closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. But Peck is looking forward to days ahead that will bring people back to Madison to learn about the Lanier Mansion and all the rest of the community and make "memories they will take with them the rest of their lives," he said.

study drama at Northwestern University.

Admittedly a poor student, Leachman lasted only a year. As a lark while in the Chicago area, she tried out for a Miss Chicago beauty contest and was chosen. She competed in the 1946 Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, qualifying as a finalist. Her consolation prize: a $1,000 talent scholarship. With new ambition, she went directly to New York, where she worked as an extra in a movie and understudied Nina Foch in the hit play "John Loves Mary."

More understudy jobs followed, and she enrolled at the Actors Studio to hone her craft. "I finally quit because of the smoking," she said later. "I couldn't stand that blue haze."

In 1953, Leachman married George Englund, later a film director and producer, and they had five children: Adam, Bryan, George, Morgan and Dinah. The couple divorced in 1979. Son Bryan Englund was found dead in 1986 at age 30.

4 Personal Finance concepts to help you focus on the essentials

Layin' it on the Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

"Finding the right financial plan can be very confusing."
Steve Dybwad

There are over 17,600 personal finance blogs and millions of money websites on the internet. With few exceptions, these sites offer advice designed to fill in the gaps created by Americans' lack of financial literacy.

Curing financial illiteracy is a noble cause. After all, many of us have experienced illnesses, stress, marital discord, and general unhappiness that often accompanies money problems. The need is tremendous, and the spectrum of the financial education gap so vast that even though you might think that everything worth saying about money has already been said, that is far from the case.

However, the plethora of financial websites, blogs, and videos have created an information "weariness" and confusion. This overload prevents many people from absorbing and implementing the excellent advice these sites offer. That's why it is beneficial to distill some of the copious money advice into four basic financial wisdom tenets. Get a handle on these simple concepts, and you'll make progress toward whatever financial goals you might have and gain some peace of mind.

4 Personal Finance Concepts to Help you prosper

Know thy money. Without financial awareness, everything you try and accomplish with your money will be less effective and more challenging. We live in a transactional society where ATMs and online accounts make it easy to transfer money without pain. That makes it much easier to spend mindlessly because you can't see the immediate impact on your credit and your net worth.

However, financial well-being is incumbent on how well you know what flows in and out of ALL your accounts at any given moment. Have a system, whether it employs software like Quicken (many choices are available) uses spreadsheets or is a cloud-based platform that allows you to see all your accounts at once.

Financial awareness is not a budget in the traditional sense but more like a dashboard. It will give you constant readings of where you are and where you are going and warning lights to alert you to potential problems.

Understand your fixed expenses and your variable expenses and optimize them. Once you have achieved a degree of financial awareness, you can take a more in-depth look at your variable and fixed expenses. For example, fixed expenses include your mortgage or rent, utilities, homeowner's dues, childcare expenses, and other monthly bills. Variable expenses include items such as groceries, entertainment, subscriptions, and gym memberships. Once you have identified and categorized these expenses, you can then look for ways to lower these expenses or eliminate them. Even with fixed costs, such as automobile insurance, you may be able to lower your rates.

You should look at every expense and ask yourself, "Am I getting this at the best possible price?" As your list of expenses grows, you might also decide to eliminate everything you do not use or use rarely.

Build up your emergency and short-term savings funds. The recent COVID-19 pandemic made many people aware of just how important an emergency fund can be. This international emergency highlighted the fact that most of us are ill-prepared for a financial disaster.

For this reason, many financial planners advise having AT LEAST six months of living expenses set aside to cope with things such as medical emergencies or the loss of a job. You should also know that there are techniques for turbocharging these emergency accounts to achieve some growth while they are waiting to be used.

Short-term savings funds contain money set aside to deal with major planned expenses like vacations, Christmas shopping, or other high-ticket items. Having cash set aside helps you avoid turning to credit cards or loans other than acquiring other kinds of debt that are not useful.

Your Time Horizon: Establish a Time Horizon when you will consider converting your accumulation phase to a "pay-out" phase, in other words retirement! Plan your retirement with the correct asset balance of money at risk and safe money.

The Takeaway:

Creating a financial life plan does not have to be overly complicated. By following four basic principles, you will create a foundation of financial awareness and will be better able to fix problems that are costing you money.

Breaking free of a transactional mindset will allow you to live a more focused, goal-oriented, and prosperous life and achieve a less stressful, more prosperous retirement.

Seeing a married man

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Readers: Seeing as Valentine's Day is around the corner and we could all use a shot of positivity, I want to hear from you: What do you love most about your partner and why? Email dearannie@creators.com with your responses. I'll print some of my favorite letters in the coming weeks, so stay tuned.

Dear Annie: I have been seeing the same man for 18 years. I say "seeing" because he is married. "Patrick" and I have been messing around together for a long time. Many times throughout the years, I've told him that he should really think about what he was doing since he was a married man. His response alternates between, "She and I are pretty much done" — clearly a lie — and "I don't know how I can love two women at once, but I want to." I tell him that he can't. We've known each other for so long now that he is one of my best friends. I want to end our romantic relationship, but I'd like to keep him as a friend. He says he won't have it that way. He continues to call and come over. How do I make him see that we can have a friendship and nothing more? — No More Messing Around

Dear NMMA: Even if you two did somehow manage to cease being intimate — a big if — a continued relationship is not a good idea. You'd just be going from a physical affair to an emotional one. Show yourself the love and respect that this man has never been able to muster for you, and stop seeing him. There is someone out there for whom you will be more than enough.

Dear Annie: "It's Been a Year" wrote to you regarding her partner's erectile dysfunction. My husband also had problems, and I was wanting to make an appointment with a urologist, sure they would find a problem and fix it. We never had that appointment. One day, thinking he was having a stroke, a visit to a family doctor sent us to the hospital for a cat scan. Turns out he had a brain tumor and passed 10 months later. Don't ignore this issue. It could be any number of reasons and some more critical than others! — Still Missing Him

Dear Still Missing Him: I am so sorry for your loss. I'm printing your letter in the hope that your message reaches anyone who needs to hear it.

Dear Annie: For the woman whose family dinners are being spoiled by her brother-in-law's misbehaving children: I'm in my 90s and have never lost interest in children and have found that misbehavior is just a need for attention. Have you ever attempted to engage even one of them in conversation? It doesn't require much. Consider a brief comment such as: "I like your blue outfit! Is blue your favorite color? That's a neat Seahawks shirt! Is that your favorite team?" Questions about school are good, too, or what they like to do for fun.

The parents may feel that discipline would be more disruptive for everyone than the misbehavior, or they might become the less-favored parent. (Though that's a whole different subject.)

Anyway, give it a try. It may not work the first time, but you know the old saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!" — A Great-Gramma

Dear Great-Gramma: I love how this solution leads with empathy. Thanks for making the world a kinder place.

Dementia or compulsive decluttering?

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: It's just an idea, but maybe "Missing My Things'" husband has dementia, not compulsive decluttering.

A few years ago, I discovered too late that while I was out grocery shopping my 77-year-old husband found a storage bin labeled "Smith Family Mementos" in a closet, went through it and threw most of it in the garbage before I got back. I didn't notice anything was missing until days later, long after the garbage truck had come and gone.

My husband was in the early, undiagnosed and unrecognized stages of Alzheimer's disease. Apparently, as he lifted each photo, each handwritten letter, each diploma and report card out of the bin, he didn't recognize the person or remember the event associated with it, so he threw it away. Not long after, I started finding other important items in the trash, such as old military uniforms and important medical records.

Dementia doesn't just affect memory; it also affects judgment and time perception. With each passing day, dementia patients live more and more in the present only.

Since my husband's been diagnosed, I've moved proactively to clear our house of small but important items by shipping them off to relatives for safekeeping or putting them in lockable filing cabinets and lockboxes that I get from Office Depot.

I hope this suggestion keeps other families from losing their precious heirlooms and important records to the awful disease of dementia. — Learned Too Late

Dear Learned Too Late: Thank you for sharing your experience to inform readers of the warning signs of dementia. And I'm struck by your knowledge and acceptance, without blame, of your husband's disease. Your wisdom is appreciated.

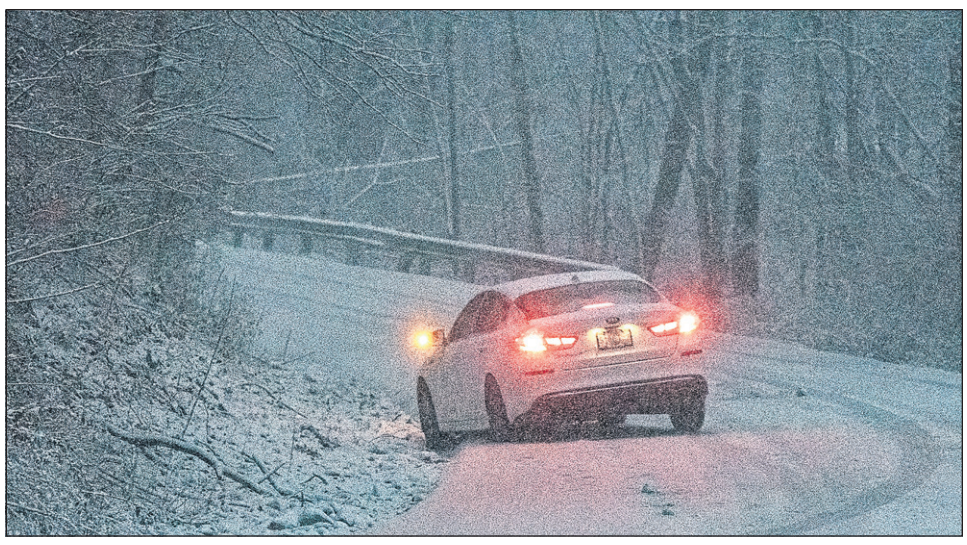
The street lamps lining the Madison River Walk along the Ohio River lend a warm glow to a cold night after the area's first snowfall of 2021 on Wednesday.



Photos by Mark Campbell

personal injury accident on Sharon Hill Road near Chelsea.

In Trimble County there was a report of a two-vehicle, head-on crash on US 42 near Pendleton but the people involved apparently refused treatment or transport. US 421 was closed for a time just south of the traffic light in Bedford, Kentucky, due to a jack-knifed tractor-trailer but there were no injuries. Several other slide-offs were reported in Trimble and Carroll counties in Kentucky and Switzerland County in Indiana.

Wallace said while some hills were too slick for some vehicles, the problem was probably less to do with road conditions and more to do with the skill of drivers and condition of their vehicles. Winters have been so mild locally that some drivers may be losing the skills needed to safely drive in such conditions.

"It's been kind of hit or miss with the snowfall we've had the last couple of years and I guess a few people have forgotten the right way to drive on it," he said.
